

Sinclair Broadcasting uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. Yet, weeks before a national election, they have decided to corrupt the public political discourse of the nation by airing a partisan attack on John Kerry, and promoting it to their viewers as if it were a non-partisan news special.

Sadly, the few media conglomerates that control ALL of the American tv stations also control public opinion. Media conglomerates ultimately determine the outcome of elections if they give enough bias to their political coverage. It's not just Sinclair Broadcasting, it's all of the media conglomerates.

We need to strengthen media ownership rules, so that broadcasting corporations are held accountable
